Title Dochumanity and Transgenerationality

Course Description Human nature is second nature, that is, it begins with technology. It is from this premise that the question of the environment and sustainability can be reinterpreted, not in terms of a return to nature, but in terms of responsible control of second nature. In this frame, during the course a specific focus will be devoted to the concepts of transgenerationality, transgenerational societies, future generations, and the role of the state in dealing with these issues.
